PREFACE

In another form and with a somewhat different scope this work was submitted as a dissertation to the University of Chicago in the Graduate Library School. Acknowledgment is made to that University for two fellowships and to the Sterling Fellowships of Yale University for a grant in aid; also to the Yale University Library for making possible its final preparation this year. The Institute of Historical Research of the University of London gave facilities for work and for an inquiry as to locations of collections of manuscripts, the results of which were published in an article in the Bulletin of the Institute for November, 1937.

To individuals the compiler's indebtedness is great. George P. Winship, Jr., worked for nearly an academic year without compensation, making index-slips from a reading of the Reports. George E. Dodds and Mildred L. Campbell did similar work for a shorter period while graduate students. Margaret Burton of London combed sale catalogues in the depths of the British Museum for wisps of information about the fate of manuscript collections, and also wrote up a considerable part of a preliminary draft of the Subject-Index. Josephine H. Thomas double-checked the list of subjects and cross-references, and Anna M. Monrad checked back to the text of the Reports a major portion of the page-references. However, the bulk of the index-slips are in the handwriting of the compiler, who takes full responsibility for the work as it stands.

Mrs. Edna Schatzman's expert typing, the painstaking preparation of copy for photo-offset by Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Lee Dawson, with vital aid in matters of form, and the patience and counsel of Ralph R. Shaw of the Scarecrow Press, are all fully appreciated.

Godfrey Davies, then of the University of Chicago, since then of the Henry E. Huntington Library, gave advice in the initial stages of the project and so did Frances H. Relf while it was being compiled under the direction of Wallace Notestein. Hartley Simpson and Thomas C. Mendenhall, both of the Yale Faculty, have read the Subject-Index and made helpful suggestions. Upon Mr. Notestein above all I have depended for criticism and encouragement, not only during the original compiling of the work but from time to time over the years in the extra-curricular labor of bringing it out in its present form.

Finally, though its first line may seem somewhat dubious if applied to the indexer, Poe's couplet from the Dunciad, Book I, has provided the motto for this work:

"How index-learning turns no student pale,
But holds the eel of science by the tail."

INTRODUCTION

The Reports of the Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts describe privately-owned collections of manuscripts of historical interest. They are a mine of wealth for the historian, but a mine that is hard to work. This Guide is designed to aid in the extraction of material relating to English history between 1603 and 1660 from the first nine of these Reports, and from later Reports on collections that are dealt with in the first nine. The main part of the Guide is a Subject-Index of topics other than persons and places. It gives direct references to volume and page in the Reports.

Since 1870 the Commission has been issuing these Reports on manuscripts of historical interest not in public custody, but in the possession of private persons or of certain corporate bodies. The Reports are of two kinds, those of the Commissioners themselves, which are made to the Crown at intervals, and those which they introduce, namely, the Inspectors' Reports on individual collections. We shall use the term "Report" in speaking of either kind, but it is to the Inspectors' Reports alone that the Subject-Index in this Guide refers. From 1870 to 1883 these were issued as Appendices to the First through the Ninth Report of the Commission, in folio, with the text in double columns. From 1885 to 1899 they were in separate octavo volumes, but numbered as Appendices to the Tenth through the Fifteenth Report. Since 1899 they have appeared and continue to appear as separate volumes or series, except that collections too small to fill a volume are combined in the set entitled "Various Collections."

In the early folio Reports the material is in many cases so unorganized and so briefly described that one may well give up at the first look at the columns of fine print. However, a number of collections have been given a supplementary or a more systematic treatment in later Reports. Here the manuscripts are usually calendared, that is, they are placed in chronological order, and each is quoted in extenso, given in abstract form, or summarized. In order to cover each collection in the first nine Reports that contains material in our field, any Report issued since the Ninth that treats of one of these same collections is included in the Index. The Digby collection appears in Report VIII, Appendix I, and an additional portion of it in Report X, Appendix I, so we include both. Many of the Bath manuscripts within our period in Report III (1872) were calendared in two volumes, 1904-07, so the Index gives references to all three of these Reports.

There are indexes to each volume of the Reports, but these, especially in the folio volumes, are mainly of names of persons and places. A composite index of place-names and one of personal names have been published by the Commission, but to find much of the material on other topics there is nothing to do but read the text of the Reports.

The text of the Reports was read to make our Subject-Index. An index-slip was made for each item, that is, each manuscript or group of manuscripts that could be entered under a particular subject or category. There are no index-entries directly under names of persons or places alone. These are considered to be taken care of not only by the Commission's own indexes but also by their lists of the collections and family papers on which they have reported, given, for instance, in the Twenty-Second Report.

SELECTION OF MATERIAL

This Subject-Index, then, is a topical guide to materials on the period from 1603 to 1660 in collections represented in the first nine Reports, and in later Reports dealing with the same collections. It is further limited to collections which were in England or Wales, in private hands and not in the possession of any corporate body, at the time the first Report on each was made. A "List of Collections" giving the titles of those which furnish the material for this Guide is added, as Appendix B. The omission of four notable collections is due to the fact that they were in process of being calendared while our Guide was being compiled. They are the Dela Warr and the Sackville collections, known together as the Knole MSS., the Salisbury (Cecil) MSS., and the De Lisle and Dudley (Penshurst) MSS.

The exact dates covered by this Guide are from the accession of James I, 24 March, 1603, to the return of Charles II, 29 May, 1660. By "English History" within these dates is meant all aspects of life, political, military, social, economic, cultural and ecclesiastical, in England, Wales and the British colonies. The history of Scotland, Ireland and the Continent is included only when considered (somewhat arbitrarily) to be inseparable from that of England. We include the Bishops' Wars with Scotland, but not internal events north of the Border; the Irish Rebellion and Civil War, but not English plantations in Ireland; the Palatinate War, but not the Seven Years' War in general. Relations with foreign nations are included, and military service of Englishmen under foreign sovereigns, but not foreign events unless reported by Englishmen nor travel abroad except by English travelers.

We omit material that is of no interest except for persons and localities, which means manorial, tenurial, heraldic and genealogical items, as well as most legal documents, appointments to military or civil offices, and scattered family letters. Many names do appear, however, in the entries under the subjects. For instance, under "Letters (collections)" we have those of Sir Abel Barker and family, and we find Bermuda under "Colonies." Purely literary items, such as poems, are omitted, and also treatises on subjects outside the limits we have set.

For the purposes of this Guide, all manuscripts or groups of manuscripts within its scope are considered "sources," whether originals or copies, significant or trivial. We omit most of those which the Report states have been printed, but have made no attempt to trace what others may have appeared in print. Such multiple copies as tracts in manuscript, or transcripts of official documents which presumably are in published collections, are not included. Omitted are all Parliamentary proceedings, in the strict sense, between the opening of the Parliament of 1621 and 10 January, 1642, since these are covered by works that have appeared in print. A list is given as Appendix A, and there is a reference to it in the Index under "Parliamentary proceedings."

FORM AND ARRANGEMENT

The Subject-Index is in entry-a-line form, with main heads in alphabetical order. A semicolon after the first group of words in an entry marks the termination of the main head. What follows, either on the same line or indented below, is a sub-head, the words before the semicolon being understood. The same applies to sub-sub-heads, which are introduced by an indented dash. For example:

Food and drink; expenses for, expenses of Northumberland for,
    accounts; for wines, etc.
    —; for food for a large establishment

Sub-heads are arranged as seems most useful, whether alphabetically, by date, logically, or haphazardly. The more inclusive or the unspecified in range of dates or subject usually comes first.

In certain cases, such as that of the "Civil Wars," specific subjects are gathered under a general subject, forming a classified catalogue of items. Usually, however,

"see also" references tie together related subjects, or else they lead from the general to the specific, though not in reverse. If there is only one entry under a specific subject, it appears also under the general subject. For instance, the item on tilting appears not only under "Tilting" but also under "Sports and games." But if there are several entries under the specific, they are not repeated under the general, but are covered by a cross-reference. Under "Sports and games" we say "See also: Hawking; Hunting," because under each of these we have more than one entry. Another reason for repetition in the Index is that the same item may appear under more than one head if it has more than one subject approach or if it contains material on more than one subject. For instance, "Prices; see also: Accounts (receipts and expenses)" means that some of the items referred to under "Accounts" contain data on prices, though the word "prices" may not appear in the entries there.

Matters touched upon in a long document or a series of letters cannot all be brought out under subject as is done for isolated items. Therefore in passages in the Reports referred to under "Letters (collections)," "Letters of news," "Diaries, journals and memoirs," there will be found material on wars and other public events in addition to the material brought out under those subjects. Manuscripts referred to under these collective heads and under such others as "Household accounts," will of course contain material on innumerable specific subjects.

DATES, ABBREVIATIONS, SYMBOLS, PAGE-REFERENCES

The year is given as in the Reports, often omitting the month and day. Very few attempts have been made to verify dates, or to establish whether a date between 1 January and 24 March is Old Style or New Style. Therefore a year standing alone may refer to either of two consecutive years. When the double date is given, it appears for example, as 1620(21), 14(24) Apr. If the Report or the compiler of this Guide queries a date, it is followed by a question mark; if a date is supplied by either of them, it is enclosed in curves (parentheses). A date followed by a dash and a blank space means that the closing date before 1660 of material covering several years is not determined. For example, we have:

Accounts (receipts and expenses)—Private 1620- , III, 292b (an item reading "Several old account-books, from 1620")

Letters (collections)
1624- , IV, 360a (an item reading "Manuscripts, historical, 1624-1734," giving no indication of the date of the latest letter before 1660)

Often the inclusive dates of a series of papers as given in the Reports, and hence in the Index, do not represent their actual range but only the period covered by the items singled out by the inspector for notice.

Besides the usual abbreviations, such as "ca." for "circa," and "co." for "county" as in "co. Rutland," we use "(n.d.)" for "no date," and "temp." for "tempore" as in "temp. Jac. 1" and "temp. Car. 1" for the reigns of James and Charles I, respectively. "Passim" after inclusive page-numbers means that there are scattered items on the subject throughout the pages cited.

Sometimes a notation such as "no.30," or "vol.xcv" follows the page-reference. This is a designation given by the owner to his manuscript and is added in the Subject-Index to make it easier to find the item in a crowded column of fine print. If there is a date following the page-reference, it is the date of the letter or document and may not be the date of the event to which it relates.

Manuscript items described in the Reports with such exasperating brevity as "a bundle of letters" are not of much use unless the originals can be seen. Many, however, are given with sufficient fullness to supply matter for research, especially if the manuscripts themselves may not be available. We have attempted, doubtless inconsistently, to point out items given with essential fullness in the Reports by placing an asterisk after the page-reference in the Subject-Index. This applies not only to isolated items, but also to a series, for instance of letters, if a fair proportion is given full treatment in the Report.

An asterisk after a particular page-reference applies also to any other page-reference to the same volume that may precede it. It does not apply to any page-numbers that follow the asterisk. In the example: Progresses, royal, V, 295b, 407b*; VI, 324a*, 456b, the two items in Volume V are given fully, and the first one in Volume VI is given fully, but the second in Volume VI is not. We repeat the volume-number when the page-reference for a sketchily-reported item precedes instead of following the page-reference for one given full treatment. An example is: Palatinate, VIII(1), 94b; VIII(1), 214a-215b, passim*. The item on 94b is not treated as fully as the items scattered from 214a to 215b.

In giving page-references the number of the Report is in roman numerals and the number of the Appendix, if any, is in curves (parentheses) after it. If there is only one Appendix, no appendix-number is given. Reports published as separate volumes are referred to under the title of the collection or series, for instance, "Rutland MSS.," "Var.Coll." (Various Collections). The following are examples:

II, 44a(vol.xcv) meaning Second Report, Appendix, page 44, column 1, a MS. numbered "vol.xcv"

III, 194a and Bath MSS., Vol.I, 1-6* meaning Third Report, Appendix, page 194, column 1, and the separate volume "Bath MSS.," Vol.I, page 1-6 (the same item in both the Third Report and the Bath MSS., but fully treated in the Bath MSS. volume only)

VIII(2),50a,b meaning Eighth Report, Appendix 2, page 50, column 1 and column 2 (two separate items)

IX(2),394a-b* meaning Ninth Report, Appendix II, page 394, columns 1 and 2 (one item, continuous, fully treated)

Rutland MSS., Vol.IV,454-540,passim* meaning MSS. of the Duke of Rutland, Vol.IV, 1911, pages 454-540, (scattered items, fully treated)

IX(2),443a (12 Aug., 1654) meaning Ninth Report Appendix II, page 443, column 1(a letter dated 12 Aug. 1654, referring to an event in 1645)

As already stated, the page-references in our Subject-Index do not lead to the Reports of the Commissioners but to the Inspectors' Reports. To his description of the manuscripts in a collection, the inspector usually prefixes a brief summary, which, especially in the later Reports, is often helpful and illuminating. We do not always give references to mention of an item in the summary, but only to its description or digest in the body of the Inspector's Report. As for the Reports of the Commissioners, these are of course important, and in our "List of Collections" we have included the numbers of these Reports. For instance, the description of the collection of the Marquess of Bath, in the Third Report, Appendix, pages 180-202, is introduced by the Commission in the Report proper, page xiii. Later these same manuscripts were calendared and published in a three-volume set, of which only Volumes I and II concern us. The Sixteenth and Seventeenth Reports of the Commission introduce these two volumes. In our Subject-Index there are no entries referring to Reports XVI and XVII, but in the "List of Collections" we give: "Bath, III, XVI, XVII, Vol. I, Vol. II," since all are important for study of the Bath manuscripts within the scope of this Guide.

We have tried to make the erratic seventeenth-century spelling of names of well-known persons, families and places conform to accepted usage, but little or no attempt has been made to clear up obscurities as to names or subject matter in the text. Doubtless many entries appear under quite the wrong headings and the compiler's digest of the inspector's record of the contents of a manuscript item may have gone far astray. Only the original manuscript can give the true meaning, especially if the notice of it is meagre, as often in the early folio Reports.

The question is, can the original manuscript be consulted? Some help toward an answer to this question is given by certain of the guides, listed as "Aids to the Use of the Reports," following this Introduction. In other respects, too, these works will take us further than does our Subject-Index. Titles in this list, which does not pretend to be exhaustive, have been annotated with special reference to the period of time, the subjects, and the particular Reports that are within the scope of this Guide.

The two brief papers by Richard Arthur Roberts, former Secretary of the Historical Manuscripts Commission (nos. 1 and 2 in the "List of Aids") are of course authentic general guides to the Reports. However, the most complete key so far to the structure and contents of the Reports is no. 3, the Twenty-Second Report, 1946, with Appendices I-IV. These appendices contain an important new feature not found in any preceding Reports of the Commission. This is a tabulation of an inquiry begun in 1941 as to the present locations of collections of manuscripts on which the Commission has reported since the beginning. Individual manuscripts are not traced, but to know that the bulk of the collection is still intact, and where it is kept, or where considerable groups of its manuscripts are to be seen, is to make a start on this quest.

To track down our quarry we make use of Appendices I, III, and IV of the Twenty-Second Report. The brief titles given in Appendix I to the particular collections are those we use in our "List of Collections," for instance, "Wrest Park" for the collection formerly owned by Countess Cowper and Baroness Lucas (Second Report). Appendix IV is useful also for giving names of families or estates by which collections or considerable groups of manuscripts within collections are known. For instance, we find "Hatton Collection of MSS. (17th and 18th cent.). See Winchelsea and Nottingham, Earl of."

The Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts does not issue a Report annually, but we may consult nos. 4 and 5 on our list for the current status of the inquiry as to locations as well as other activities of the Commission. Sometimes a story begun in the section "Notes and News" is concluded in the section on "Accessions." In Volume XXI, 1946-1948, page 176, the Secretary of the Commission is quoted as stating that the Puleston MSS., of which a considerable portion were reported as "untraced" in Appendix III, C.2, of the Twenty-Second Report, "have come to light on the Riviera, having been bequeathed by the late owner to the Prince of Monaco, and have been acquired by the British Museum." Proof of the end of this strange migration is on page 258, under "Historical Manuscripts. A. Accessions." The British Museum here gives their numbers as Add. MSS., 46397-46400, identifying them as including the very papers reported on in the Second Report.

No. 6 on our "List of Aids" gives information on the availability of documents, largely manorial, family and estate muniments, in County Record Offices. To consult manuscripts in the possession of private persons, of course permission must be obtained from the owner in every case.

In nos. 7 and 8, Read's and Davies's bibliographies of the Tudor and Stuart periods, respectively, other Reports of the Commission having material in the field of this Guide are mentioned. Names of persons, families and places are covered by the Commission's two "Guides" (nos. 14 and 15).

Our Subject-Index, on the other hand, is a topical guide. It brings out under subject-headings manuscript items on English history from 1603 to 1660 on particular pages of the first nine Reports and Reports supplementary to them. It is presented as a means of unearthing hidden material and extending the area of research in that critical period of the history of England.

AIDS TO THE USE OF THE REPORTS OF THE HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION

A Bibliography

Annotated with special reference to English history from 1603 to 1660.

The term "Report" used herein refers to Reports of the Commissioners and Reports of the Inspectors as well.

General Guides

1. Roberts, Richard Arthur. The Reports of the Historical MSS. Commission. London, S.P.C.K.; New York, Macmillan, 1920. (Helps for students of history, no.22) Treats briefly of the work of the Commission, of the nature and use of its two kinds of Reports, and of its "Guide to the Reports, Part I, Topographical." Surveys the contents of each Report, noting collections important for certain periods and for certain topics, such as "Virginia," "Travels," "Navy."
2. —Concerning the Historical Manuscripts Commission. (Royal Historical Society. Transactions, 3d ser., IV, 1910, 63-81)

Names several classes of papers likely to be found in family muniment rooms and the treatment that is given to each class by the Commission's Reports.
3. Historical Manuscripts Commission. Twenty-Second Report. London, H.M. Stationery Office, 1946.

Appendix I. List of Reports.

Groups the Commission's publications, each series together, instead of chronologically as in previous Reports. Lists contents of each Report, collection by collection, giving also brief title if not the same as the name under which it appears in the table of contents of the volume.

Appendix II. Archives of corporate bodies.

Appendix III. Privately owned collections. Present location and ownership.

A.1. In original location. A.2. Elsewhere in private ownership. A.3. In temporary storage or transfer pending. A.4. In libraries or other public custody. B. Otherwise accounted for. 1. Destroyed. 2. Excluded. 3. In Eire. C. Collections not located. 1. Dispersed in sale room. 2. Untraced.

Appendix IV. Index of collections.

Lists, all in one alphabet, collections on which Reports have been issued to 1942, names of owners and location at the time the Report on each was first made, and titles of important groups of papers comprised in them. The present location of privately-owned collections is indicated by marginal numbers, A.1., A.2., etc., referring to the sections so numbered in Appendix III.

4. H.M. Stationery Office. Government publications. Sectional list no. 17. Reports of the Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts.

Takes the place of the list under "Record publications" in the Annual consolidated list of Government publications. 1935-1938 ("List Q" in its issues to 1934). In the issue revised to January, 1951, is contained: a brief account of the history and work of the Commission; a list of the short titles of collections each of which constitutes an entire Report; chronological list of the Reports; and a "List of Reports" which repeats and brings up to date Appendix I of the Twenty-Second Report.

5. University of London. Institute of Historical Research. Bulletin. London, New York, Toronto, Longmans.

Issued twice a year, May and November. The following sections in current issues frequently contain material bearing on the Historical Manuscripts Commission and the collections on which it reports:

Notes and News.

Mentions current Reports, published or in preparation, and other work, such as microfilming, inspection of collections on which no Report is published, and information as to safety and locations of collections on which the Commission has reported.

Historical Manuscripts. A. Accessions.

Lists groups of manuscripts currently placed in the custody of public or other corporate bodies, namely: Public Record Office, British Museum, Bodleian, Cambridge University Library, National Library of Scotland, National Library of Wales; other university libraries; college libraries; County Council Record Offices, public libraries, archeological societies, etc.; other institutions.

Historical Manuscripts. B. Migrations.

A select list of manuscripts in recent sales or in private ownership.

There is an index, mainly of personal and place-names, to sections A and B together, at the end of each volume of the Bulletin.

Special Guides

6. Historical Association. County records. By F.G. Emmison and Irvine Gray. London, Philip and son, 1948. (Its Special series, 3) Appendix II, The County Record Office and the student.

A condensed analysis of replies to a questionnaire on certain classes of records and facilities for their study in County Record Offices.

7. Read, Conyers, ed. Bibliography of British History, Tudor period, 1485-1603. Issued under the direction of the American Historical Association and the Royal Historical Society of Great Britain. Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1933. Section D. Source collections. 3. Historical Manuscripts Commission Reports. (nos. 78-255)

A list of collections which, though selected for material on the Tudor period, includes a considerable number containing items of the period 1603-1660.

8. Davies, Godfrey, ed. Bibliography of British History, Stuart period, 1603-1714. Issued under the direction of the Royal Historical Society and the American Historical Association. Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1933. English political and constitutional history. Section I (a) Bibliographies, guides, sources.

Under this, nos. 1-178 include titles of guides to the Reports, and names of collections, with brief mention of important groups of papers therein. Under particular topics, numbers here and there throughout the book refer to particular Reports.

9. Lomas, Mrs. Sophia Crawford (Williamson). State papers of the early Stuarts and the Interregnum. (Royal Historical Society. Transactions, new ser., XVI, 1902) Names collections important for the period 1603-1660.

(pp.119-123,131-132)

10. Davenport, Frances Gardiner. Materials for English diplomatic history, 1509-1783, calendared in the Reports of the Historical Manuscripts Commission, with references to similar materials in the British Museum. (Historical Manuscripts Commission. Eighteenth Report, 1917. Appendix II)

A chronological list, giving page-references to the Reports, or to entire volumes or series of volumes which consist mainly of these materials. Relations with any particular country can be traced only by reading the list through, as there is no index.

11. Terry, Charles Sanford. An index to the papers relating to Scotland . . . in the Historical MSS. Commission's Reports (1870-1907). Glasgow, MacLehose, 1908.

A descriptive portion notes materials that have been published by clubs and societies; gives some page-references to the Reports. A subject-index, mainly personal and place-names, refers to pages in the descriptive portion, and has been republished in the following:

12. Matheson, Cyril. A catalogue of the publications of Scottish historical and kindred clubs and societies, and of the papers relative to Scottish history issued by H.M. Stationery Office, including the Reports of the Royal Commission on Historical MSS., 1908-1927. Aberdeen, Milne and Hutchinson, 1928.
13. Jameson, John Franklin. Guide to the items relating to American history in the Reports of the English Historical Manuscripts Commission and their Appendixes. (American Historical Association. Annual Report for the year 1898. Washington, Government Printing Office, 1899, pp. 611-708)

Covers the Reports through the Fifteenth, Appendix IX, and the Salisbury (Cecil) MSS., Vol. I-VI. Limited to the United States and to colonies in the area now the United States, also to Newfoundland, Canada, Cuba, Puerto Rico and Philippines. "General items: America" and "Items relating to individual colonies" are each listed in order of date, with page-references to the Reports. An index of persons refers to the pages in this work, which forms Appendix III of the Third Annual Report of the (American) Historical Manuscripts Commission.

Indexes

14. Historical Manuscripts Commission. A guide to the Reports on collections of manuscripts . . . issued by the Royal Commissioners for Historical Manuscripts (1870-1911). Part I, Topographical. London, H.M. Stationery Office, 1914. (Parliament. Papers by command, Cd. 7594)

Out of print; new edition to include Reports issued 1911-1947 is in preparation (1951). An index of place-names, usually entered under the modern forms, but with variants added as found in the Reports. A composite index made up from the indexes in the Reports themselves, but giving references to volumes only, not to pages, e.g. "2nd R."; "Bath II."

15. —Guide to the Reports of the Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts, 1870-1911. Part II, Index of persons. Edited by Francis Bickley. London, H.M. Stationery Office, 1935-38. 2 vols. Vol. 2 out of print.

A composite index made up from the indexes in the Reports, with an effort to identify each of the persons named. As in the case of "Part I, Topographical," we must turn to the indexes of the Reports themselves for page-references. An Index to persons in Reports issued 1911-1947 is in preparation (1951).

SUBJECT-INDEX

A Topical Guide to Materials on English History, 1603-1660, in collections of manuscripts represented in Reports I to IX and subsequent Reports on these collections.

Page-references to the Reports are given as in the following examples:

IX(2),370a,b meaning Ninth Report, Appendix II,

Bath MSS., Vol.II,57* meaning Calendar of the Manuscripts of the Marquis of Bath, Vol.II, page 57.

An asterisk means that the Report gives the contents of the manuscript item with a fair degree of fullness.

The semicolon after a group of words in an index-entry is a device to mark the termination of the main head. What follows, either on the same line or indented below, is a sub-head.

Abatements upon marriage of Princess Elizabeth,
     1613, III,204a(no.18);IV,352b
 Accounts (receipts and expenses)—Private;
     17th cent. (early), VI,313a
     1620- , 1629, III,292b
     1656, VI,420b
     Sir W. Cavendish, and others, to 1660, III,44a of John Smith of Nibley(?), 1601-1640, V,360a of Earl of Northumberland; 1602-1629, VI,228b-231a
